Major racecourses in Japan

Kyoto

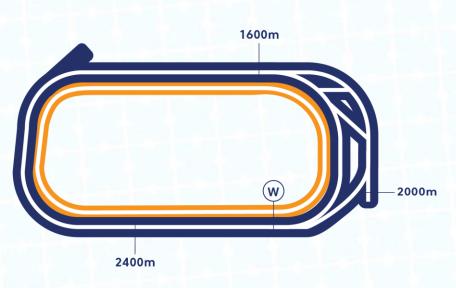

Two turf courses (clockwise) - inner course measures 1783m and outer course measures 1894m with a 328m (inner course) and 404m (outer course) home stretch. There is a slight incline around 1200m from finish.

Relatively short home stretch with tighter turns. Horses commence move before home turn have an advantage.

Dirt course measures 1608m with a 329m home stretch

Tokyo

Tokyo Racecourse is the best and largest facilities of the racecourse in Japan.

Turf course (anti-clockwise) measures 2083m around.

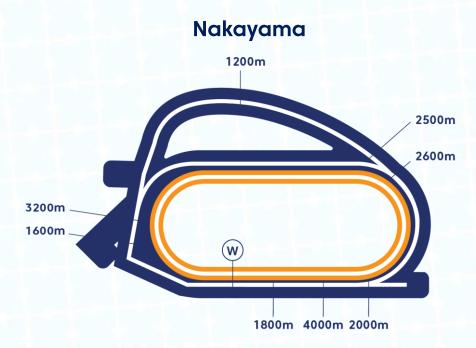

Level track with long stretches and sweeping bends. There is a home stretch of 526m.

Dirt course measures 1899m with a 502m home stretch.

Major racecourses in Japan

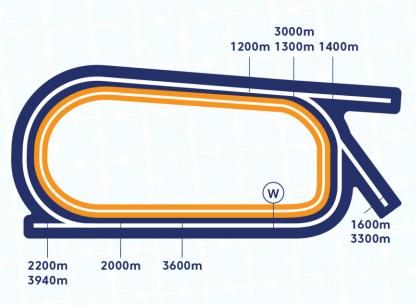

There are two turf tracks (clockwise) - the outer course measures 1840m around and the inner course measures 1667m around with a 310m home stretch.

This is the hardest and most severe track in Japan. Horses must climb up an extreme slope from the final bend to the winning line.

Dirt course is oval shaped and measures 1493m around with a 308m home stretch.

Chukyo

There are two turf courses (anti-clockwise) measures 1706m with a 413m home stretch. They are both undulating and have steep uphill finishes from around 400m to the winning post.

The dirt track is 1530m in length with a 411m home stretch, and is again undulating with a stiff uphill finish.

Historical Draw Analysis

Kyoto

There is no draw advantage because of long stretches giving horses plenty of time to find their preferred positions and cover.

Tokyo

There is no draw advantage because of long stretches and sweeping bends.

Horses who are fast starters with low numbers are favoured on the dirt tracks, especially if it rains.

Nakayama

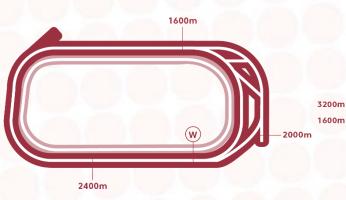

Horses drawn middle to low in sprints have the advantage, provided they can find cover early on.

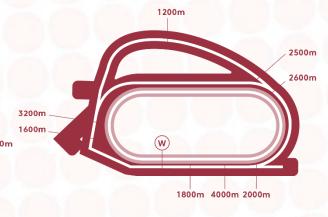

This track suits horses that can race close to the early speed tempo.

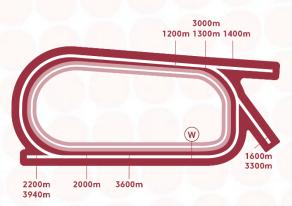

Chukyo

Both turf and dirt tracks are fair, although horses drawn from 1 to 7 have a slight advantage in races over 1200m to 1600m, but a definite advantage when conditions are soft.

Emotions

The horse is the most important factor in racing.

A horse maybe a champion or have the best form in a race, but if it does not feel or look 100% or is overly excited, the horse will not show its true ability.

16

Look closely for any tell-tale signs when a horse is walking around the Parade Ring.

Unhappy and worried:

Ears flattened against the neck

Content and interested in the surroundings:

Ears are pricked forward

Feeling Curious:

Both ears tilted forwards

In doubt or feeling uncertain:

One ear is pricked forward and the other held back

Watch Horses Closely Going Down To The Start And Other Signs

Because ground conditions vary greatly in simulcast racing, it is important to look at a horse's action when it goes down to the start.

Grass Cutter Action: If a horse keeps its front legs close to the turf and does not bend its knees, the horse will love fast or firm ground but will dislike soft/yielding ground at it can't lift its legs up.

High Knee Action: If a horse lifts its front legs up high when going to the start, it will like soft/yielding ground but will dislike fast/firm conditions - the horse will not feel comfortable hitting turf hard.

Good

A horse walking around the Parade Ring or before the start who looks alert and relaxed.

Bad

A horse who is sweating (neck and body wet and showing white froth on body) and getting too excited means it is using up too much energy.
